Overview

Lindsey concentrates her practice on employment law and counseling, insurance coverage, and professional liability defense.

In her employment practice, Lindsey advises and represents employers in a wide range of employment litigation before federal and state courts and administrative agencies. She has expertise handling employment cases across many different industries involving wrongful termination; discrimination, harassment, and retaliation; employee leaves; disability accommodation; breach of contract; wage and hour disputes; employee classification; and whistleblowing.

Lindsey counsels employers on a variety of employment issues, including performance management, employee discipline and termination, leaves of absence, employee classification, wage and hour law compliance, and accommodating disabled employees. She often assists her clients in drafting personnel policies and developing risk management strategies tailored to their business needs. She also provides training on anti-discrimination and anti-harassment policies and procedures as well as effective management practices.

As an insurance coverage attorney, Lindsey advises and represents insurers nationwide in complex insurance coverage and bad faith matters. Lindsey's experience spans across many different types of policies, including primary and excess professional liability, managed care, and commercial general liability.

Lindsey also defends a variety of individuals and businesses against claims of professional negligence. Her past clients include builders and contractors, skilled care facilities, medical professionals, accountants, and attorneys. Lindsey's professional liability practice includes representing physicians, psychologists, dentists, and other healthcare professionals in the defense of Board of Registration investigations, complaints, and applications, and other regulatory compliance matters. She also advises professionals who are the subject of court orders and subpoenas.
